By joining HUB as a lifetime member for just $10, you're helping grow the membership base which makes Hub's voice louder and stronger when advocating for removing cycling safety concerns in Metro Vancouver.

The more members, the more likely decision-makers will listen when Hub advocates for cycling improvements and safer streets for people of all ages and abilities.

Insurance for cyclists

Bicycle insurance ... is it necessary? There isn't an easy answer to this question and in reality, it depends upon each person's situation with home-owners or renters' insurance, B.C. medical insurance as well as travel medical insurance outside of B.C.

Most injuries sustained within B.C. should be covered under B.C. Medical Services Plan. Cyclists should ensure they have travel medical if they are cycling anywhere outside of B.C. including any other Canadian province or territory, the USA or around the world. *Make sure you check the fine print on your coverage.

Some (but not all) homeowner's insurance policies provide third party liability coverage in the event that you caused damage to others or their property while cycling. Check your policy and/or talk to your insurance agent to determine what coverage you have.

For those who may not have adequate insurance, either for coverage of their bikes or for third party liability you may wish to either upgrade current policies or explore the purchase of bicycle insurance.

For example, Pedal Power Insurance can provide insurance for:

- Third Party Liability - $1,000,000
- Personal Accident – Basic or Enhance Level
- Physical Damage – Covers damage to your bike

Pedal Power Insurance (<https://www.pedalpowerinsurance.ca>) also provides members of HUB a discount on their insurance.
